

Dear India,

Never did I expect that I would be writing to you like this. Firstly, I just want to say how incredibly proud I am of each and every one of you, whether you are staying home or still going to school, you are all helping to stop this virus spreading. Keep washing those hands with soap and water. For those of you who didn't get to see the outcome of the bread experiment, we learnt that that's the best way to kill the germs. I can honestly say I felt sick when looking at the bread which had been wiped on my laptop - I'm glad I don't need to touch it for a while.

I hope you are not working too hard at home. Use this time to learn about something that interests you. This could include cooking, sewing, or picking your own history project to learn about. I don't want this to be stressful or cause any arguments at home. Just try to read every day (don't forget to write it down!) and practice your timetables as much as you can.

I'm pleased to see lots of you have been using education city to help with your learning. Next time you are logged in, don't forget to check the 'Go Live' section. I keep checking but no one is there for me to play ☺

Don't forget to make sure you have some fun! Inbetween doing some school work for Mr Marshall and Mrs Sherwin, Jessica and I have been having lots of fun at home. We have been building den's, doing some digging in the garden, jumping in muddy puddles, playing games and creating our own cinema at home. These activities are just as important as your school work. We have tried really hard to make sure we are laughing every day as I hope you all are.

I am really looking forward to seeing you all again soon and sharing more stories with you. Make sure that you look after yourselves and those around you. Stay safe!

Love from

Miss Stupples xxx
